

Living in an Urban, Suburban, and Rural Areas

Urban Area

- Urban areas have a lot of buildings and streets.
- Urban areas do not have a lot of land to grow crops.
- To grow crops in an urban area, you have to make gardens on small areas of land, or even plant them on rooftops!

Suburban Area

- Suburban areas have a lot of houses and places to shop.
- Suburban areas have a lot of land for parks, but not for things like farms.
- To grow crops in a suburban area, you have to put aside land to be used specifically for farming.

Rural Area

- Rural areas do not have a lot of buildings or houses.
- Rural areas have a lot of land to plant crops and farm.
- Rural areas can have many different types of crops that can grow in a large space.

Crops in Different Places

In urban areas, crops can grow on rooftops.

In suburban areas, crops can grow in people's backyards.

In rural areas, crops can grow across large areas of farm land.

Steps to Plant Crops

Step 1: Choose how you want to grow your crop. Circle your choice

On a rooftop garden

In a planter box

In a large field

Step 2: Choose where you want to grow your crops. Circle your choice.

Suburban area

Rural area

Urban area

Steps to Plant Crops

Step 3: In the box below, draw what your space for your crops will look like. Be sure to also draw the area they are in.

Step 4: Now, it's time to build! Use art and building supplies to create your rooftop garden, planter box, or large field to plant your crops.

